

Department of Fisheries and Wildlife Diversity Statement:

Our Department values biodiversity, recognizing that natural diversity of organisms and landscapes forms strong building blocks for robust ecosystems. This ethic also applies to diversity within our Department, including colleagues, students, and administration. We recognize that professional diversity aids in developing strong and robust approaches in our research, extension and teaching efforts regarding natural resources and conservation. We also expect that greater awareness and inclusion will better equip us and our students in addressing the needs of an increasingly diverse public.
